Want to stay young? Keep learning!

The Anglican Foundation has a long history of providing grants and bursaries to support theological education. It supports students in the traditional divinity programs across the country, and it has also branched out to support atypical programs that meet the changing needs of today's theological students and the people they serve.

"Outside the box" thinking is more than a cliché. It involves approaching problems and questions in new, innovative ways. This includes enabling students to journey along unique paths of training for ministry.

Here's how donors to AFC are making this happen

HENRY BUDD COLLEGE FOR MINISTRY

The Pas, MB • Diocese of Brandon

Some students simply do not fall into the conventional categories of traditional educational programs. The cost of program fees and transportation to city colleges can be barriers to study. Henry Budd College for Ministry recognizes these challenges and has created a fund to provide bursaries for Indigenous students with the support of the Anglican Foundation.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE FACULTY OF DIVINITY

St. John's, NL • Dioceses of Western, Central, and Eastern NL
& Labrador

Queen's College is now taking training for ministry courses into remote parts of the province with the help of AFC. "This project is all about innovation," says Provost Dr. Rick Singleton. The Diploma in Theology and Ministry program has been redesigned to provide local training at sites across the province. Highlighted are four pillars of ministry: good theological education, pastoral practice, spiritual development, and faith-based community learning.

VANCOUVER SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY

Vancouver, BC • Diocese of
New Westminster

In recognition of new realities, VST has created a Contemporary Anglican Formation Program with the support of AFC grants. This innovative approach to learning features a weekend residential teaching retreat model with spiritual direction, pastoral care, and communal practices. Students preparing for ordained ministry are developing a meaningful sense of the ethos and culture of the Anglican Communion through this successful program.

MOOSONEE SCHOOL FOR MINISTRY

Cochrane, ON • Diocese of Moosonee

Recognizing a clear need for a different form of ministry training, the Moosonee School for Ministry was created for First Nations and non-aboriginal students to attend modules of study over the course of several weekends. Parish field work is undertaken between modules. AFC provided funding for students whose travel costs were prohibitive. With the vast distances covered by the diocese, these modules make training for the diaconate and priesthood possible.

Back- to- school Quiz

1. Of approximately 1,650 parishes in Canada, how many parishes give an annual donation to AFC?
a) 1,650   b) 670   c) 230
2. How much money does the Anglican Foundation receive each year from parishes, dioceses, and individual donors?
a) $100,000   b) $50,000   c) $10,000
3. How much money is available every year from legacy donations and investment income?
a) $60,000   b) $100,000   c) $600,000

Now you have to do some math...

$$100,000 + $600,000 = $$  _____
(Amount AFC disburses in Canada every year!)

But did you know?

AFC receives REQUESTS for funding that are
DOUBLE its capacity!
